Rearing Pheasants a New Industry.

Now that it has been made possible to rear, sell and ship pheasants on the same basis as chickens, people are beginning to awake to the possibilities in pheasant raising. Not only are pheasants beautiful in themselves, but there is a ready market for both birds and eggs. There is no reason why they should not be more generally raised, for they will stand the coldest climate, and require only about one-tenth as much food as do chickens. They may be allowed to range over fields and woods, but it is an equally easy matter to rear them in a small enclosure.—John W. Talbot in the Country Life Magazine for July.

New System of Punctuation.

The editor of a newspaper published in central Pennsylvania tells of articles that he frequently receives from a certain citizen. They are always pertinent and worthy of publication, but they are punctuated in most peculiar way. Meeting his correspondent one evening at a friend's house, the editor said: "That was an excellent letter I got from you this morning, and I am going to print it Saturday. But tell me, what rule do you follow for punctuation?" "Why," said the gentleman, "the same rule that I learned when I was a boy. I put a semicolon every twelve words and two commas between each pair of semi-colons." Youth's Companion.

Miss Sophia Campbell, who has been visiting with friends in Barre and at her former home in Graniteville, left to-day for Fairlee, where she is to make a stay of several days in camp at Lake Dunmore before returning to Boston, where she is employed.

Bill Stuart's Barre A. A. team returned last night from Randolph, where it defeated the town team yesterday afternoon by the score of 3 to 1. Randolph proved a tough nut for the local swat artists to crack and the outcome of the contest was not definitely decided until the eighth inning. A large crowd saw the Randolph boys go down to defeat with their colors flying. Mendez for the B. A. A. fanned 11 men and allowed eight hits. Speare, the Vermont twirler, struck out six men and allowed as many hits. Marchesi's sensational catch and the fielding and hitting of Stuart, Smith and Tomasi featured. The teams lined up as follows: B. A. A.—Tomasi cf, Colombo 1b, Marchesi 2b, Stuart ss, Scampini rf, Smith 3b, Calderara c, Rullo lf, Mendes p; Randolph—Salisbury lf, Morse ss, Scott 3b, Angell 1b, Hancock rf, Pike 2b, Cantiline cf, Haskins 2b, Speare p.

To encounter a hail storm of such violence and duration as to give the landscape the appearance of a storm of hail stones, and the general artist are supposed to lend was the experience of Mrs. Carrie B. Gonyo and a party of friends who motored to St. Johnsbury yesterday afternoon. As the motorists neared the east end of Joe's pond in Danville, it was patent enough that a storm was brewing and the auto was forthwith steered into a neighborly-looking barn. Presently the temperature lowered perceptibly and the first gust of wind brought a storm of hail stones, which the onlookers in the barn declare assumed large proportions. For some little time after the storm abated, the road and fields looked as though there had been a light fall of snow. Passing Joe's pond, the motorists saw a woman gathering the hailstones in a wooden bucket and in response to an inquiry from the car, she gave out the information that the hail was to be used for freezing ice cream.

One of the largest crowds of the season heard the Barre Citizens' band last night in an enjoyable program of national, popular and classical airs. City park overflowed with people and the streets contiguous to the public triangle were filled with automobiles. Assiduous practice has had its way with the musicians and the concert was wholly pleasurable to all. Difficulties attending the dispersal of numerous automobiles after the concert hour were finally eliminated through the active efforts of two traffic policemen, who were stationed at the northwest corner of the park. Those of the motorists who were willing to proceed cautiously, groped their way out of the crowd with little discomfort or delay, but others, eager, it seemed, to make a hurried get-away, came in for a good lot of attention from the police.

Charles H. Doyle, a Montpelier autoist, paid a fine of $3 and costs of $5.14 when arraigned before Magistrate H. W. Scott in city court this forenoon, it having been alleged that a touring car which he drove about the streets of the city was inadequately lighted one night recently.

Mr. Doyle stated that it was a technical violation and that his negligence was not culpable, inasmuch as his car is not equipped with extra side lights on the front and that only one head was burning. The respondent was taken in custody by Officer John S. Murley on a complaint made to Grand Juror William Wishart.

William S. Hutchinson of St. Albans, a traveling agent and civil engineer in the employ of the Central Vermont Railway Co., was in the city yesterday adjusting the railroad's tax accounts with the city. Taxes held by the city against the railroad, aggregating nearly $600 and covering a period of several years, were settled at the office of the city clerk. Litigation over the right of the railroad to claim exemption on property not used for railroad purposes prompted the Central Vermont to postpone the matter of paying back taxes until a test case had been carried to supreme court in the suit brought against the railroad by the city of Montpelier. When a decision favorable to the city was returned, the railroad got ready to pay back taxes in Barre, Montpelier, Brattleboro and a number of other towns and cities in the state.

HERBS FOR THE FLOWER GARDEN.

For Use and Ornament.

Every flower garden should include a few herbs, not only because their scent and bloom lend an old-world charm to the spot, but because they afford an abundant supply of scent and seasoning for indoor use. There is, for instance, the old-fashioned rosemary, an evergreen shrub, which grows from two to four feet high and has spring flowers of white, tinged with pale blue, the leaves being very fragrant. These bushes need a moderately warm and sheltered spot, but they grow very freely in almost any garden soil, and should be propagated by cuttings in the spring, sown preferably in a border, or by layering the lower branches in July and August. Rosemary is very lovely when in bloom, and a great favorite among herbs. Lavender is perhaps the most popular herb in the market. Of the two kinds chiefly known, lavender spica is the plant most commonly cultivated in gardens and may be raised from seeds sown in the spring. It should have a sheltered position and be placed in light, well-drained soil, and if cultivated from plants they should be placed in the ground about 18 inches apart. This makes a charming hedge, and after blooming must always be cut back into shape again. After five or six years, the hedge may become bare and yearly looking, when it should be replaced by cuttings from the current year's plants; these should be about three inches long and a third of each cutting must be inserted in the soil. In order that dried lavender may retain its refreshing and delicate scent for an appreciable length of time, great care should be taken in cutting and drying the flower spikes. They should be cut when the blossoms are thoroughly dry, but before they have begun to fall, and the drying-out process should be very slow, indeed, never spreading them out in the full sun, but always in a cool, shady place, that they may dry gradually; after which they should be tied together and hung in a dry cupboard until needed.

Rye and Hyssop.

The common rye (ruta graveolens) is another herb deserving a place in every garden. It is a species of evergreen shrub growing about three feet high, with yellowish blossoms and grayish green leaves. It may be grown from seed, and should have a warm and sheltered spot in the garden, and if planted in well-drained soil will bloom freely from June to August. Hyssop is a form of dwarf evergreen shrub which needs replacing about every fourth year, and should be planted in a warm spot in light soil. If the earth happens to be heavy in the place picked out for the hyssop, work in a little sand and leaf mould, which will give it the proper consistency. When in bloom it is very ornamental, some varieties bearing white, some blue, and some red flowers; these blossoms are very bitter and aromatic, thus making a valuable addition to rich seasonings.

For household purposes thyme is perhaps more universally used than any other herb. Originally it comes to us from Italy, where in a dried and green state it is largely used for sauces and the inevitable soup, which forms the major part of the Italian peasant's dinner. It is a charming garden plant, exceedingly ornamental and especially suitable as a low border for a path or grass walk. To thrive satisfactorily, however, it should be planted from seed in a dry, sandy soil and ordinary care accorded it.
